

Florence Headlam

☞ It's been a headspin to join the Gardeners' World team, and I'm excited to be encouraging and inspiring city dwellers to bring new life to their outdoor spaces. In everyday life I'm a full-time gardener, doing design, landscaping and maintenance. I enjoy the physicality, creativity and variety of my work. ☞

Nick Macer

☞ I came to horticulture when I became obsessed with trees at 21 years old. For most of my career I've been running my specialist nursery, Pan-Global Plants. I hope to share my passion for unusual plants with UK gardeners. ☞

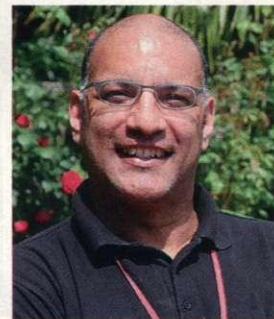

Mailey

atched Gardeners' World since I was seven, part of it is an honour. My 'garden doctor' role plays to my strengths as a designer and I've worked on gardens on four continents and at the Chelsea Flower Show. And the science strand explores organisms often overlooked in gardens. ☞

Frances Tophill

☞ I did my horticulture and botany degree at the Royal Botanic Garden, Edinburgh. I was lucky enough to get a job on Love Your Garden on ITV, and now the great Gardeners' World. I've worked in community gardening for years and hope one day to combine this with my other passion, which is botanical conservation. ☞

Zephaniah Lindo

☞ I've worked building and maintaining gardens for years, and now teach at Capel Manor, Enfield. Gardeners' World helps to raise the status of gardening, so to be part of it is a huge privilege. ☞

Mark Lane

☞ I was interested in gardening from a young age and it's been a life-long ambition to appear on Gardeners' World. I am a published gardening writer and proud to be the UK's first wheelchair-bound TV gardening presenter. ☞ child, I gardened with my mother, who was a first-class flower gardener. We watched Gardeners' World together and I studied horticulture at college, Essex. It was my interest in gardening that led me to manage a garden in Wiltshire. It's my hope to bring a little of that to the viewers of Gardeners' World. ☞

Power
